W. S. THOMPSON,

LONDON STYLES FOR MEN

Latest Things in Frock Coats, Ties and Hats-A Departure in London Correspondence of the Haberdasher This year's smart man, viewed in the light of both his tailoring and his haberdashery, will be a subdued individual. He has apparently made up his mind for a period of somberness, and into whatsoever establishment you go this impression is strongly conveyed. The gray flannel cloth, dark for choice, and with fine vertical stripes one-half inch to one inch apart, will constitute, as regards material. the standard of smartness this season. As for style, the lounge suit, with singlebreast-breasted coat with high-cut lapels, square corners and flapped pockets; double-breasted high-cut waistcoat, and trousers of medium leg width will be the prevailing taste. Some men prefer the double-breasted coat and single waistcoat, and this will be equally correct, being purely a matter of taste. A fair sprinkling of morning coats of similar material cut rather long and full in the skirt and worn usually with a fancy double-breasted waist coat will. I think, be seen this summer except that it is dut a little longer than hitherto, reaching to about an inch below the knee, the lapels being silk fronted to within one inch of the edge. Fancy Walstcoats. A style in the fancy waistcoat line that seems to be attracting a good deal of favor just now consists of a garment made in some suitable shade of gray with a spotted pattern of minute stars in white silk or of small stripe-shaped spots, the stripes slanting alternately in opposite directions. It is cut in that peculiar V-shape, double breasted at the top, single at the bottom. It closes high up in the neck, with no collar and leaving but a small expanse of shirt front visible. The edges are bound round with an inch-wide braiding of black ribbed silk carried up the lapsels and right ribbed silk carried up the lapels and right around the neck. The pockets are four in number, with flaps edged in the same way. The buttons may be any variety of fancy metal or of plain white pearl, and either flat or ball shaped. The front comes down rather to a point; really a couple of points, formed by the crossing-over portion. This waistcoat is worn either with the lounge suit or with the morning coart. For the frock coat the correct thing is the plainly cut double-breasted waistcoat, which, how-ever, may be in fancy material if preferred, or the single-breasted variety either with or without collar. Gay Ties Not in Favor. Although the season is well advanced there is as yet no sign of the return to favor of the gay and festive ties and shirts that prevailed last year. The pink and white linen and silk ties have gone the way of the blue and white silk shirts for the time being and are relegated to obscurity. The correct tie this season to wear with the frock or morning coat is one of the soft, black finely ribbed silk variety with white spots or stripes. The spots may be of almost any possible de-sign, while in default of a riot of color, stripes seem to have made up their minds to display as much complication in the way of direction and width as they can. A good many ties are worn with the stripes graduated in size, being wide at the bot-tom and gradually narrowing toward the top. A taste also seems to have sprung up with some men to have their ties made with a slightly different pattern on the back to that on the front, so that when back to that the travat or bow a noticeable nov-elty of effect is produced; in some cases this is carried as far as having the front of the tie a very light gray and the back a very dark. By the way, as the season advances the light gray variety will be more extensively worn than at present. A novelty in the way of color has appeared for cravats in the shape of a new kind of blue, something between the Oxford and Cambridge, with a dash of gray in it. With the dark gray flannel suit it looks remark-

the design most favored being a circular cluster of brilliants with a ruby or emerald

Single-Breasted Frock.

A desperate effort appears to be pending to revive the single-breasted frock coat boom of last year. It will be fresh in the memory still how some imaginative journalist saw, or thought he saw, or was primed by some one else who saw or imagined wearing the garment at a garden party last year. In spite of this august associa-tion, however, somehow the idea never caught on with the elect. There is, of course, no earthly reason why such a coat should not come into favor. It can easily be made to look very smart, and certainly it has superior hygienic claims over its double-breasted comrade for the hot weather. Not a few people expressed sur-prise last year that it did not take on. I think the real reason lay in the fact that, as I pointed out at the time, the whole tale about the king and the coat was a fake, and that, once discovered, it was an easy transition for the man of fashion to

A new departure has been made in the construction of the Norfolk jacket. It has been hovering about, so to speak, for a long time, but has now come so pronouncally edly into favor that it behooves me to place it upon serious record. Briefly it relates to the design of the pleats, which now, instead of being made in the beltlike style that formerly prevailed, are turned inward, presenting the appearance of grooves or slits running up the coat. It is contended that for golfing, cycling and other sports this inverted pleat affords more play to the figure than in the old style. As far as appearance goes, how-ever, there is not much to be said in its favor; it does not look so well as the belted pleat even when it is new, and as time goes on the grooves tend to lose their reg-ularity, gaping in parts and presenting snything but a smart appearance. I do not think the novelty is destined to enjoy a very long life. The shoulder yoke in the Norfolk jacket, about which I wrote some months ago still retains its popularity the months ago, still retains its popularity, the confused at present. The "straw-yard" will certainly be extensively worn, but I fancy its rivals will have a better show this year than hitherto. A few men, greatly daring, have ventured to wear a plain straw, with not only the conventional black band, but also with a narrow black border all around the edge of the brim. Arising indirectly out of the military spirit, some men have been wearing their "strawyards" with a plain leather band, buckled exactly like a belt, but this also does not exactly like a belt, but this also does not make progress in favor, except with the fair sex, who seem to be taking to it. A somewhat extraordinary affair, made of straw and shaped like a cross between a "Baden-Powell" and a wideawake, is making desperate efforts to secure recognition. It has raised edges or pleats running across the crown in the form of a cross, and is fitted with a narrow black band finished with a ted with a narrow black band finished with long straggling bow with ends that flutter in the breeze. The Panama straw will, I think, be worn more than last year. It does not suit every man, and therefore wil not achieve that universal favor enjoyed by its plain round rival, but there seem to be more of it, especially among the ultra-smart, who recognize the possibilities it presents as a sort of manifesto of the wearer's social position. There seems to be no limit to the absurdly extravagant prices that may be given for it. By the way, one prominent dealer whom I interviewed on the subject laid this latter fact to your charge saying that the viewed on the subject laid this latter fact to your charge, saying that the American houses were buying up all the output. For automobilists a specialty is being introduced in the shape of a sort of yachting cap with a glazed peak and fitted with a transparent visor which can be drawn up or down at pleasure. The idea is, of course, to protect the eyes from sudden agreet. to protect the eyes from sudden assail-ments in the way of dust or insects. I observe, however, that some motor owners prefer to protect themselves by fixing a wide expanse of sheet glass on their ma-that their rapid increase in this country of late has resulted, as was inevitable, in the establishment of a fashion department the dark gray flannel suit it looks remarkably well. speed attained by motors nowadays and the exposed position of the driver, this question of warmth becomes a serious one. This time last year a feature of masculine garb consisted of the brown boot, which was advanced to a very high position in public favor. This year it practically does not exist. It has gone with the festive shirt and ties. Whether as the season advances it will force itself back to favor is a doubtful point which I cannot yet prophesy about. With the frock coat, however, I notice it is allowable to wear patents with brown cloth uppers and white pearl buttons, the toes fitted with a plain cap. For evening dress the severely plain patents, without markings of any kind and with black cloth uppers, remain absolutely de rigeur. SUIT FOR DIVORCE WITHDRAWN. Mrs. S. B. Newberry Decides to Remain With Her Husband.

A dispatch from Sandusky, Ohio, says: Mrs. S. B. Newberry, saughter of Andrew D. White, ambassador to Germany, will not air her infelicitles in the divorce court after all. There was a conference yesterday between members of the Newberry family and peacemaking efforts succeeded.

The warring husband and wife have agreed to come to terms. The action for alimony and an injunction preventing the husband, Prof. S. B. Newberry, manager of the Sandusky Portland Coment Company, from drawing moneys on deposit in two banks has been settled. Tomorrow the case will be dismissed. The Newberrys move in the most exclusive circles in this city and in Cleveland. The wife's sudden decision to sue for divorce came as a great shock to her friends in society. Only on Monday last did the do-mestic storm break in all its fury, and then Mrs. Newberry decided upon a divorce, which will not now be asked for. ARCTIC EXPLORERS SAIL. Baldwin Party Leaves New York on

The New York Herald of today says: Evelyn B. Baldwin, who, equipped with the most varied assortment of supplies ever parried by an explorer, will try to reach the north pole, with the aid of the steamer America, and by sledging across the ice fields, assisted by ponies or dogs, sailed yesterday on the Friedrich der Grosse. With him went William Ziegler, who is the financial strength of the expedition.
Their names did not appear on the passenger list of the steamer, and the secretary with which the explorer has surrounded the scientists who would accompany the expedition would be given to the public, expedition would be given to the public, they are not known, but there are at least three professors on the ship, and it is possible they are to go with Mr. Baldwin.

It is expected that the explorer will sail from Dundee, Scotland, in the America, which carries the flag of the New York Yacht Club. Mr. Ziegler will go with him to a point farther north, and later return, so it has been stated. It is possible that Mr. Ziegler's plans have since been changed, for yesterday his children, Miss Florence and Master William Ziegler, jr., salled with him.

No expense has been spared to equip the party. They have supplies for a three years' cruise, and dogs, Siberian ponies and balloons will assist the trip. Besides Mr. Peary, there are in the north Lieutenant Sverdrup of Norway and Duc d'Abruzzi of Italy, all striving for the same

The "LABRADOR" is built on scientific principles. It has many good features not to be found in the best of other makes, of which the removable ice chamber is most important. It is thus very easily cleansed, and when worn out can be replaced with little cost—thus saving the expense of an entire new refrigerator.

The prices are moderate, and, combined with the results, make the "LABRADOR" the best to buy.
